A fireplace in a bathroom? Works brilliantly in this beautiful Victorian terrace house where a former bedroom has been transformed into an ensuite haven of relaxation with a freestanding, egg-shaped stone bath as its focal point. Two vanities with mirror storage are on either side of the mantelpiece. A double open shower has a choice of a fixed storm shower or hand-held lower D38 shower. This bathroom has retained the existing Victorian charm of the room with fireplace and large plaster cornices, and has a feeling of warmth, elegance and style.

A huge ensuite was required to balance the large proportions of the other rooms in this palatial home. An interesting double vanity was installed as a feature, and mirror storage is well lit with overhead low-voltage lights and incandescent side lighting. Fabulous features include a spa with headrests, a huge double shower, a bidet and toilet hidden behind a low wall capped in thick mitre-edged stone, and a wall-mounted plasma screen. Access to this big project was gained through a full-height window, leaving the rest of the house dust-free and peaceful.

RENOVATED BATHROOM PROJECT OVER $30,000

The aim was to create a stylish bathroom that maximised the view of the Asian courtyard and maintained a Japanese theme. The back-to-wall freestanding bath uses the small space available and is at right angles to the courtyard. The toilet is hidden away in its own separate room. The dark floor tiles emulate those in the courtyard outside, allowing the two rooms to feel as one.
